Rounding out this year's champs were Dan Dailey, Bob Hotchkins, Roberta Fall, and Ron Sumner. The remainder of the runner-ups were Paul Compton, Joe Kosowski, Mary MacCloud, and Will White.

Linda Balfour also lead all the distaffers with a high average of 151 for the season. Len Phillips set the pace for the men with a 167 average. As for the high single game, Diane Fontaine led the way for the women with a 208 while Gordon Simson topped the men. He had a 231 game. High triples were relatively close. Linda Balfour, 537, and Joe Ruggles, 588, showed the way.

Even though the hours were long and the building decidely hot, the cool Parisian nights compensated for all. Everyone took advantage of their well-deserved free evenings in a different manner. Some attended the many night clubs, while the others preferred simply an evening stroll along the Champs de Elyees. Unquestionably, the main event of each night was the fantastic French food.

Since the fast pace of the show continued unrelentingly, those manning the booth began to feel the continued pressures. However, everyone maintiained that outward enthusiasm which is an indispensable part of a successful exposition. As a result, there was rarely a moment when there was not a crowd about a machine firing questions at its operator. By Show's end, everyone was looking forward to returning home and a quiet weekend's rest.

Cg compugraphic

The CompuWriters

. . . the most widely-used line of phototypesetters in the world.

When Compugraphic introduced the CompuWriter Series of direct-input phototypesetters, it marked a totally new era in low-cost composing equipment. For the first time, the quality and versatility of phototypesetting became available in a compact, economical and easy to use machine. Literally thousands of CompuWriter customers—from newspaper plants to in-plant shops—have realized substantial savings and increased productivity by setting their type the Compugraphic way.

Compugraphic Corporation pioneered the field of automated typesetting in the early 1960's. Today, Compugraphic manufactures a comprehensive line of direct-input phototypesetters, automated phototypesetters, editing and correcting terminals, OCR equipment and total composition systems. Your Compugraphic Sales Representative is in a unique position to match the right equipment to your requirements at the lowest possible cost.

The CompuWriter I and CompuWriter II offer the same ease of operation, typographic versatility and quality that have made CompuWriters famous . . . combined with the latest advances in electronic and photographic technology. Backed by the complete Compugraphic library of over 250 text typefaces, both models produce a full range of text formats as well as "headings" or display lines. Different typographic formats can be combined in the same job and type styles can be freely mixed, even within the same line of copy. Many jobs are camera-ready just as they appear in output form, thereby greatly increasing productivity and reducing paste-up.

CompuWriter I is capable of mixing two type styles with the added facility of setting display lines up to 24 point. Priced at $5,950—in the same range as strike-on equipment—CompuWriter I offers the quality and versatility available only in phototypesetting at a surprisingly affordable price.

CompuWriter II features four type styles in two sizes, plus it offers two programmable format controls that boost operator productivity. Changes in line length, line spacing and type size can be accomplished with a single keystroke. Priced at $7,950, the CompuWriter II is ideal for setting columns of text, ad composition, forms work—everything from the routine to the complex.

Mag-Set is an optional recording/playback unit that adds the convenience of word processing to phototypesetting operations. Copy entered on the CompuWriter keyboard is simultaneously recorded on magnetic tape cassettes that can be played back through the CompuWriter's character display for correcting and updating. Materials stored on tape can be re-set using different typographic formats or different type styles without re-keyboarding the copy. Priced at $4,000, Mag-Set is a time-saving way to process author's alterations and to update lists, directories and other date-critical jobs.

Budget jobs are produced with far greater quality... Quality work is produced with far greater economy...

Speed in Electronic Operations

Amazing speed is possible in the creation of a line of reading matter, combining electronic operations devised by various companies, methods and fields, to reproduce from a film strip an individual letter on photo-sensitized paper by strobe flash lasting for 0.0004 parts of a second, optically stopping to make the image used for print.

Benefit Questions Answered

Many questions are asked regularly about Richardson's benefits. For this reason the Communicator will be used as a vehicle for answering some written requests for benefit information.

Hobby Corner

Mark Blackstone, Leader - Training in the Field Service Department, has what must be considered a most interesting hobby. Mark indulges in wood carving. Surprising as it may seem, when you see the picture of his work, Blackstone has only been wood carving for a year and a half. Even more significant is the fact that he has had no formal instruction in the art.

. . . designed to turn even the beginner into an effective producer of quality typography.

While CompuWriter offers impressive typographic versatility, it's unmatched for ease of operation. A number of highly complex typesetting functions are completely automatic; many others are reduced to a few simple keystrokes. You'll find operators among your own typists who will soon master the machine and plunge right into full productivity.

CompuWriter II

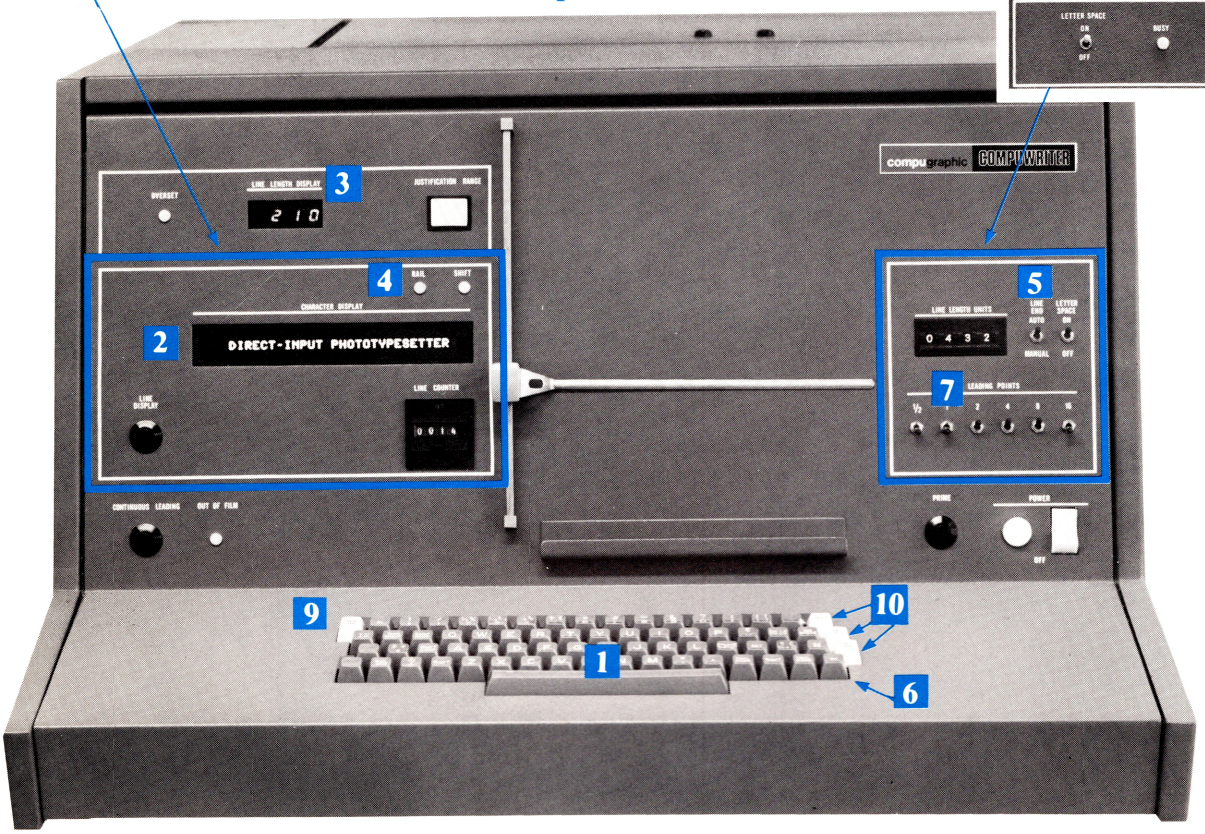
CompuWriter I



1 Typewriter-like keyboard—The soft touch keyboard puts quality typesetting at the fingertips of any typist. Operators use familiar typing skills to learn quickly and are soon producing at peak level.

2 Character display—To insure the accuracy of composition, all keyboarded characters and typographic functions are shown on a highly-legible 32-character display.

3 Line length display—As characters are keyboarded, their respective width values are subtracted from the total line length. The display shows remaining line length, enabling the operator to achieve the best possible typographic fit.

4 Font indicator—The operator has selection of four type styles (CWII) or two styles (CWI) directly from the keyboard. Indicator lights show what style the machine is setting.

5 Automatic line ending—Justified columns of text or ragged right composition can be produced at peak typing speed—the machine automatically decides when lines should be ended for proper typographic fit.

6 Discretionary hyphenation—For best character fit in the automatic line ending mode, the operator can apply discretionary hyphens between syllables of words near the end of a line. The machine automatically selects the best break, inserts a hyphen and ends the line.

7 Format Selection—Any line length up to 45 picas (7½ inches) and line spacing from 0 to 31½ points are quickly and easily selected at the CompuWriter control panel.

8 Programmable format control*—Two different line lengths, leading values and type sizes can be programmed and then selectively accessed by a single keystroke. This feature is especially useful for cut-runarounds, tabular work and other jobs requiring frequent changes in typographic format and type size.

9 Keyboard character spacing/leading control—For special typographic effects, space between characters and between lines can be added directly from the keyboard. Characters may be kerned* (space between characters reduced) and reverse leading* in 1-point increments to 24 points can be achieved with the same keyboard ease.

10 Correction capability—At a keystroke, the operator can cancel incorrect characters, words or the complete line being keyboarded before errors are set into type.

Understandable

CompuWriters are designed to be used effectively by office staff, not computer experts. In fact, just about any typist would feel right at home in front of the CompuWriter keyboard—there's very little to get accustomed to. Operational training is included with the price of the equipment; applications training can take place at your facility or at one of our regularly-scheduled classes from coast to coast.

Professional

High quality composition is what CompuWriters are all about. The distinctive appearance of CompuWriter typography lends emphasis, importance and dignity to all kinds of jobs—from the routine to the complex. Finished materials are consistently sharp and clear, equal to the most demanding standards.

Field-Proven

CompuWriters are not prototypes—they're proven performers with a track record consisting of many thousands of successful installations world-wide. This experience is matched by a highly-trained staff of installation specialists, applications representatives, service engineers and technical consultants. Compugraphic has the in-depth support to insure that you get the maximum performance from your machine investment.
